

Type Summary

Type 4: The Romantic Individualist

Type 4s are authentic, creative, expressive, deep, and temperamental. They bring a unique beauty, depth, and creativity to the world around them in their search for significance and value.

Type 6: The Loyal Guardian

Type 6s are committed, responsible, faithful, suspicious and anxious. Their dependability, sense of humor, ability to foresee problems and fierce loyalty cause them to be incredible team players, hold groups together, and benefit the common good.

Core Motivations

Your Type has many important factors, but four Motivations are the driving force behind your thoughts, feelings, and actions. These affect when and how you react in life and relationships.

Type 4: The Romantic Individualist

- ⚠ Being inadequate, emotionally cut off, plain, mundane, defective, flawed, or insignificant.
- ☀ Being unique, special, and authentic.
- 🔗 Envy: feeling that you're tragically flawed, something foundational is missing inside you, and others possess qualities you lack.
- 🔥 You are seen and loved for exactly who you are—special and unique.

Type 6: The Loyal Guardian

- ⚠ Feeling fear itself, being without support, security, or guidance; being blamed, targeted, alone, or physically abandoned.
- ☀ Having security, guidance, and support.
- 🔗 Anxiety: scanning the horizon of life and trying to predict and prevent negative outcomes (especially worst-case scenarios); remaining in a constant state of apprehension and worry.
- 🔥 You are safe and secure.

As A Couple

Healthy Relationship

Type 4 and Type 6 couples can be a fantastic combination because they are both in tune with the emotions of themselves and others. They each bring intuition and empathy, allowing their partner to feel secure, heard, and accepted. When the relationship is thriving, they support and balance each other and making the world a safer and more beautiful place.

Struggling Relationship

Type 4 and Type 6 couples can also have problem areas since both Types struggle with feelings of abandonment and a constant craving for validation. They can look to one another to “fill themselves up,” or conduct unhealthy “tests” of the relationship. Their codependent tendencies can wound one another, bringing out their insecurities and resulting in a loss of trust and intimacy.

Gospel Alignment

In Galatians 2:14, Paul explains to the churches of Galatia what it looks like when our heart condition is out of step or alignment with the Gospel, and we begin to believe we have to work for our relationship status with God instead of resting in the truth that we are his beloved child. In verse 20, Paul says, “I have been crucified with Christ. It is no longer I who live, but Christ who lives in me. And the life I now live in the flesh I live by faith in the Son of God, who loved me and gave himself for me.”

Our assessment results help you and your spouse recognize your alignment with the Gospel. When misaligned, your mind and heart wander from your true identity in Christ, and you start to take control of your own life. When aligned, you know, believe, and trust in the finished work of Christ and rest in your full identity in him. To experience Gospel alignment in your marriage, remember that you and your spouse are God’s cherished children, and ask the Holy Spirit to work in your heart and renew your mind.

Misaligned with the Gospel	Aligned with the Gospel
When your mind and heart wander away from fully believing and trusting in what Christ has done for you, you begin to think that you have to take care of your needs by yourself. You are still his beloved child and know God is loving and providing, but you aren’t 100 percent sure if he will do what’s in your best interest. Therefore, you think you need to take over some control of your life. Getting distracted by what you want (and often demand) causes you to be misaligned with the Gospel and veer off our best path for growth. This level of health is called, “Living in Our Own Strength.”	You are resting, believing, and trusting in who you are in Christ and living as His Beloved (healthy and aligned with the Gospel). You are no longer using your personality strategies to meet your needs and desires. Instead, you are coming to your Heavenly Father first, who you know loves you and will provide for you. You also trust that he already accomplished what you need and desire. As you keep your focus on him, you are filled and renewed perfectly every time. This level of health is called, “Living as his Beloved.”

Communication Style

Misaligned Communication	Aligned Communication
They become more demanding and insistent that the other come through for them in a specific way, leading to more unhealthy pain and misunderstanding. Both Types may begin to subtly withdraw attention and affection from the other as a way of defending against the hurt of potential abandonment. Small disagreements often lead to conflicts and over-reactions, and as the unhealthy cycle continues, each partner feels more wounded and rejected, and relational intimacy suffers.	They know their spouse still struggles here on earth and can communicate in hurtful ways, but they can extend grace, mercy, and forgiveness since their heart is resting in the freeing work of Christ on their behalf. They communicate with empathy, patience, and integrity, knowing they are fully loved, valued, and secure in Christ, despite their fears and emotions.

Type 4’s Communication Style

Misaligned: Moody, Emotionally Intense, Overly Explosive or Detached, Condescending, Self-Focused

Aligned: Authentic, Deep, Balanced, Empathetic, Good Listener

Type 6’s Communication Style

Misaligned: Reactive, Anxious, Skeptical, Suspicious, Untrusting, Self-Doubting

Aligned: Warm, Caring, Compassionate, Witty, Good Listener, Engaged

Conflict Style

Misaligned

Each partner's personality motivations and beliefs become heightened, and conflict style becomes unhealthy. They each begin to insist that their spouse see the situation the way you do, and conform to what they believe is right or best. The more one partner resists, the more the other will demand, feel hurt and play out the conflict from their personality's fears, weaknesses, and unhealthy hardwiring.

Type 4s in Conflict

Approach to Conflict

- You take a reactive and more emotional approach to resolving conflict, focusing on the magnitude of the issue and your spouse's response to it.
- Your desire and priority is to give full weight to the problem and to have the opportunity to express your feelings about it.

Misaligned

- You prioritize your thoughts and feelings over your partner's, ruminating on your hurt feelings, frustrations, and irritations for extended periods. You disengage and hold on to internal resentment, keeping you from restoration and resolution.
- You feel shamed and insecure, believing the disagreement to be proof that you are flawed, insignificant, or lacking.
- You get frustrated when you perceive that your partner doesn't understand and thoroughly acknowledge the weight of the conflict and how it makes you feel by trying to ignore it or solve it too quickly. This feeling activates your Core Fear of being emotionally cut off, inadequate, or insignificant.

Aligned

- You remain steady, grounded, and sober-minded in the face of tension, clearly expressing yourself in a way that allows your spouse to hear, understand and move toward you.
- You remember that your feelings don't define you. You control your feelings instead of letting them control you.
- You approach the conflict with empathy and self-control, considering your partner's perspective and remembering that the disagreement does not reflect on your worth and significance.

Aligned

They both know that each of their hearts can easily go astray, so they both desperately cling to the finished work of Christ before moving toward each other with needs and wants. Focusing on Christ, who perfectly provides for and fulfills them in a way their partner never can, helps lessen the sparks of conflict.

Type 6s in Conflict

Approach to Conflict

- You take a reactive and more emotional approach to resolving conflict, focusing on the magnitude of the issue and your spouse's response to it.
- Your desire and priority is to give full weight to the problem and to have the opportunity to express your feelings about it.

Misaligned

- You perceive that you alone must bear the burden and responsibility for the conflict at hand.
- You focus on negative possibilities and worst-case scenarios, discouraging and disheartening your partner.
- You get frustrated when you perceive that your partner doesn't understand and thoroughly acknowledge the weight of the conflict and how it makes you feel by trying to ignore it or solve it too quickly. This belief activates your Core Fear of being abandoned, without support, or blamed.

Aligned

- Before entering conflict or significant discussions, you take time to calm your thoughts and focus on positive outcomes.
- You ask your spouse what they are thinking and feeling, fully listening without jumping to conclusions. You ask clarifying questions and allow your partner to answer without becoming defensive or suspicious.
- You realize that sometimes your thoughts are speculations and not necessarily reality. You take time to separate worst-case thinking (your inner committee) from what is actually true in your relationship.

Childhood Impact On the Relationship

Primary Childhood Message

Our “Childhood Message” is the message we were told directly, or we sensed and interpreted from life circumstances through the lens of our personality Type. This message greatly affected and pained us as children, and now as adults. It’s crucial that we identify how these messages have impacted our hearts, so we can replace them with the healing, freeing truth of Christ.

Misaligned

You believe your childhood messages to be true, causing you to live them out in ways that are not beneficial to you or others.

Aligned

You recognize you have interpreted your growing up years through the lens of your personality type. You take the time to separate and trust what is true of you and your spouse in Christ over what is false.

Type 4’s Childhood Message

Childhood Message: “It’s not okay to be too much and not enough.”

Misaligned: You look to your spouse to rescue you from your deep inner turmoil and fear of abandonment. You assume you can’t really be understood and loved for simply being your authentic self, so you push your spouse away, relying on your inner feelings and imagination. Your alienation further fuels your shameful belief that something is fundamentally missing or tragically flawed within you.

Aligned: You realize that God sees and loves you for the unique person you are, and that you only need to look to Him for your validation. He created you with deep longings, feelings and passions, and He wants the real you to be in close relationship with Him. You begin to minimize your self-referencing thoughts and behavior, focusing on your partner and appreciating them on a deeper level.

Type 6’s Childhood Message

Childhood Message: “It’s not okay to trust yourself.”

Misaligned: You view the world as a dangerous and unreliable place and believe it’s your responsibility to protect yourself and your mate from probable harm. You look to your spouse to fill your need to be safe and secure and struggle to make decisions in and outside the relationship because of your self-doubt, confusion, and worst-case thinking. You alienate yourself from your spouse with your suspicious, untrusting, and anxious behaviors.

Aligned: You realize that you are God’s cherished child, and He will provide you with the inner guidance and protection for which you long. You rely on Him to take worst-case thoughts from your inner committee captive, replacing them with truth, wisdom, and balance. This realization frees you up to be more intimate and in tune with how your partner is feeling and to listen without making assumptions.

Suggestions for Growth

Type 4

Pray that you will truly know, believe, and trust that Jesus Christ’s life, death, and resurrection perfectly satisfy all of your deepest longings to be accepted and secure. Rest in knowing that you belong, and are seen and understood for your unique and authentic self. As Christ’s cherished child, you have been rescued from all shame and inadequacy.

Type 6

Pray that you will truly know, believe, and trust that Jesus Christ’s life, death, and resurrection perfectly demonstrates how all-powerful and sovereign He is, and that you can cast all your cares onto Him. Take rest in the fact that you are never alone or abandoned, and that the God of the universe knows, loves, provides and protects you.

Becoming Us

A thriving marriage requires coming alongside your spouse as they grow into the person God created them to be. When you surrender to the Holy Spirit and depend solely on Him, you'll experience powerful transformation and complete freedom as individuals and as a couple.

Misaligned

You constantly seek to change your spouse, trying to conform them into your own image. You look to your partner to “fill you up,” instead of looking to Christ to meet all your needs.

Aligned

Your heart is at rest and satisfied because it knows that Christ has completely fulfilled its Core Longing. This allows you to trust and have patience in God's perfect timing for your partner's growth. You seek unity by having more understanding and compassion for yourself and your spouse.

How to Support Your Type 6 Spouse

- Encourage your partner when you see them growing, trusting that God will give them the clarity, courage, and strength they need to handle life's challenges well.
- Remind and demonstrate to them that they are not alone or abandoned. Listen to their concerns with empathy and without judgment, sincerely offering help and support.
- Affirm when you see them noticing the good in any situation.

How to Support Your Type 4 Spouse

- Encourage your partner when you see them growing, displaying emotional balance and believing that they are complete and cherished in Christ.
- Affirm them by complimenting the positive qualities you see and admire in them. Remind them that nothing is missing in them and you love them for exactly who they are.
